

This receipt does not qualify as proof of cost. There is no indicate of what the amount covers.

However, combined with documentation from the university on the cost per 3 credit course (2) and the number of credits listed with the course description (3), this qualifies as proof of cost. (note, this would still require the course start and end dates to qualify as all documentation required for this EDT application)

Overview

This course introduces you to the field of cultural studies and covers two bodies of literature: the critical and scholarly work of cultural studies and the mass-produced entertainments of popular culture. To understand the critical readings in this course, you must recognize and appreciate your watching skills, and unpack the assumptions and habits they make invisible. Not only must you learn to read popular culture but you must relearn and become self-conscious of the skill sets you have internalized. Reading both the critical and the entertaining is a balancing act this course will help you perform well.
